

1.3 Progress into the industry

Role 1: Music Technician

Current skills required for role - To be a music technician i will need good teamwork skills with a strong ethic to get on with the roles and functions it will require for me to do the job i have been set, i will need good music tech skills and good knowledge to know what I am doing during these roles and knowledge about microphones and Speakers along with the technology in between.

Accepted routes into role - You can apply for jobs in theatres to control the music and sound effects for pantomimes or be hired from bands to work off stage on a laptop controlling sound levels on a digital mixing desk or soundcraft, you could also be hired from touring bands if you are local to a festival they are performing at and can work behind the signs to maintain the tech.

Availability of role - There are places all around the Uk where you can get jobs in this industry and educate yourself with work experience along with actually experiencing what the role which you are doing requires. Along with theatres which are located all around the world.

Competition for the role - Due to recent encounters with Covid-19 many theatres had closed down due to social distancing and in recent months it is beginning to improve but over the time of closure people would have wanted to get apprenticeships in this industry and i feel it has formed a huge que with the next generation trying to apply at the time time as the last were.

Role 2: Radio Host

Current skills required for role - You will need to know about sound engineering along with the differences between condenser and dynamic microphones along with good socials skills which would be important as you would have to have various different guests on the station, you will also be required to have the correct toning in your voice, this is important because people listening wouldn't want you too sound slow or grumpy like you hate your job. They want someone to get them ready for their day and deliver the news they would like to hear in the correct fashion.

Accepted routes into role - You can get jobs on other radio stations and talk shows and it's quite likely if you show the correct attitude that people will like what you are doing and your name will spread getting you into more roles.

Availability of role - Radio is one of the most important things in the world even after the invention of TVS radios are still highly used, they are used everywhere in homes, workplaces and cars all around the world although its important to consider if you we an English radio host you couldn't just go to china and be a host to one of their radio station as along with being a host it's also important to consider language barriers.

Competition for the role - With Covid-19 the demand for these roles like everything else is definitely backed up and will take some time to flow normally again like it did before the pandemic.
