

1.1 Skills & Knowledge

I have gained many specialist skills since my time at Rivers whilst completing Music Technology course.

In the Recording Studio

With using digital audio in the studio with bandlab, I feel confident with how the DAW operates and would and have used this DAW experience on other DAWs like Cubase and garage band. I have been able to edit audio and record audio including multitracking and would confidently be able to do this for a range of employers.

I understand both of the dynamic and condenser mic types and what they are each best used for in the recording studio. I strongly understand mic techniques and the distance between where to mix things up.

I partially understand how distortion and delay work as effects and how they affect the sound output.

Live Sound engineering

When being a live sound engineer I can confidently say I understand how to use a digital mixing desk and the functions of all the different knobs and buttons. How to tweak the sound output. I partially understand the requirements of sound acoustics of a room regarding the reflections and microphone bleeding. But I do understand both of the mic types, dynamic and condenser. And what they are each used for on the stage.

I partially understand some EQs on a mixing desk and all the different effects dials which can change the sound produced and how to use soundcraft. I know how to set up a stage and mic up instruments and use a PA system. I am very confident with the various different cable types for example jack cable, XLR

1.1 – Employability

I feel that I written a good CV but I am not sure the standard of this CV will be as good as it would be expected to be, work to be done here. I am currently employed at Sainsburys and I have learnt a few employability skills that I would consider vital in any line of work:

- I use my phone calendar
- My phone alarm to stay on time
- Communicating with the public
- Keeping my uniform clean

I am very thoughtful in discussions and in times where other people give their thoughts which I may or may not agree with. I understand confidently what employers are looking for, good attitude, a mature manner, a strong ethic to work hard.

1.1 – Study Skills

I fully understand the things that take away my concentration and distract me, and I know how to avoid these. I do find myself taking the odd note down but however I do feel like there is room for improvement. I can write a report but the level for me is that i could do better and get stronger in this area. The strongest effect to this is that my reading and analysis skills can change depending on what the source I am reading is.

I am good at research tasks and am confident with using the internet to find the answers that I need. I research multiple sites to get the answer I am looking for and do not just go with sites like wikipedia
